

MACCABEES TO FIGHT ENEMIES

MacArthur Considering a Proposition.

WILLING TO TRANSFER ALLEGIANCE TO U. S.

Complain That Tagals Had Murdered Them, Burned Villages and Ask to Be Protected and Given Arms—Performed Valuable Scout Duty For American Troops—Orders Issued by Otis Inviting Volunteers to Re-Enlist For Six Months—Several Skirmishes Have Taken Place in Vicinity of San Fernando.

Manila, May 27.—[Special]—Several skirmishes have taken place in the vicinity of San Fernando, where small bands of rebels make night attacks on the Americans.

This is evidently to worry and harass the American troops. The Americans are shifting their troops about the north and south of Manila, evidently with the purpose of, garrisoning the important points during the rainy season.

MacArthur is considering a proposition to arm and enlist the Maccabees against their old enemies, the Tagals.

A delegation of leading Maccabees called on him and presented him with an address, assuring the American commander of the Maccabees' friendship for him and expressing a willingness to transfer their allegiance from Spain to the United States.

They complained that the Tagals had murdered them, burned their villages, and asked to be protected and given arms to protect themselves.

The Maccabees performed valuable scout duty for the Americans.

Orders have been issued by General Otis inviting volunteers to re-enlist for six months.

The transport Morgan City arrived from San Francisco with six hundred troops.

Major Diggles of the Thirtieth Minnesota, who was shot in the head near San Miguel, May 8, is dead.

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, San Fernando, via Manila, May 27.—The insurgents made a daring attack upon San Fernando at 3:30 o'clock Friday morning. The attack was one of the few during the insurrection in which the Filipinos have boldly attacked any number of American troops. They had crept back to the trenches from which they were driven by Gen. MacArthur and Funston on Wednesday last, and made the early morning attack upon the city which once was Aguinaldo's capital.

The Montana regiment, under Gen. MacArthur, immediately left San Fernando and formed a skirmish line along the railroad. This quick move surprised the insurgents, who fell back, but all the time of the retreat returning fully as heavy a fire as the advancing Americans poured into them.

Two companies of the Kansas regiment were rushed to the support of the Montanas. The insurgents crossed the tracks to the north of the position taken by the American troops and made a final stand. Their line extended on both sides of the railroad tracks. They poured a heavy fire into the Montanas.

A battalion of the Kansas regiment under Major Watson formed on the left flank along the railroad, while the South Dakotas re-enforced the outpost under Col. Frost.

Gen. Hale, at the head of the Iowa regiment, swung around to the right. The insurgents were thus surrounded on three sides.

The fight was fast and furious for an hour. Gen. MacArthur was ready to bring the artillery into play when Gen. Funston reported that the Filipinos were retreating. They broke their way out of the semi-circle of American soldiers to the woods and broke up in small squads.

When daylight broke it was ascertained that the insurgents had carried many of their wounded with them to the woods while still protected by darkness.

As the result of the fighting the Americans lost one man, while nine were wounded. The Filipino loss is known to be twenty-five killed. Many were wounded, but they were carried away by their comrades. The Americans captured six prisoners.

Is Opposed to Further Parleying.

Washington, May 27.—President McKinley is said to be convinced that further parleying with the Filipinos will be useless, and that they must be whipped into submission. Orders are said to have been given to the American commissioner in Manila to this effect, and when the rebel envoys departed they were informed not to return unless prepared to accept unconditional surrender.

Recruits Will Sail June 7.

Washington, May 27.—The secretary of war has ordered 2,000 recruits now at San Francisco for regular regiments in the Philippines to sail on the transport Sheridan, June 7, for Manila. This

SEVERAL PERSONS INJURED AND PROPERTY DESTROYED

Dane County Deputy Sheriff Imitates Funston By Swimming After Escaped Prisoner—Rosie Wiesung, Missing From Kenosha Marries an Italian And Is Sorry—State News.

River Falls, Wis., May 27.—A cyclone struck this city a few minutes after 6 o'clock last evening. It picked up Michael Linehan's barn, tossed it about, and landed it upside down. It then started up South Fork valley to George T. Smith's brick yard, where sheds were demolished and considerable damage done.

Half a mile further up the valley a large barn on the farm of C. P. Burnett was scattered over half a section of land, the dwelling house escaping. The same is true of the Major Burnett place across the road.

Harvey Weydt, aged sixteen, was caught in the whirl, and his ribs were broken. Johnnie Dells, aged fourteen, who was with him, was struck by some flying missile and his back was injured. Another boy is also said to have been hurt.

Large trees were twisted off or uprooted. The cloud was funnel-shaped and maintained well defined outlines on its way up the valley for some three miles, when it veered to north and finally detached itself from the earth.

An Imitation of Funston

Madison, Wis., May 27.—Deputy Sheriff Kanouse had an exciting chase after an escaping prisoner from the county jail last evening, and succeeded in catching him only after swimming several ditches full of water, and struggling through a swamp. The prisoner, who is a tramp, got out of a rear door of the jail, and started across Lake Monona on the railroad tracks. Mr. Kanouse drove in a buggy around the end of the lake and headed his man off, when the latter took to the marsh, with the deputy sheriff after him on foot. The man was finally corralled in a barn and brought back to the jail.

ELECTRIC ROAD IS FAST BUILDING

GENEVA LAKE PROPERTY OWNERS HERE BENEFITED.

Cars to Be Running From Harvard in Four Weeks—Considerable Money Was Subscribed Here in Janesville Towards the Expense of Building—Other Notes.

Local owners of property along the shores of Lake Geneva, report more than 125 men now at work on the Chicago, Harvard & Lake Geneva railroad, and they are making rapid headway in its construction. Last Saturday the men employed in track laying put down and spiked 2,700 feet of rail, which they considered a good day's work, when it is considered that some of the space covered was in making two curves. When on a direct road to Walworth, where little filling in is required, they expect to spike in nearly a mile of road per day. They expect to be able to reach Big Foot by tonight. The route will continue on the east side of the highway until they reach the farm residence of the late Harlow Cook, where they expect to put the track in the center of the road through Walworth village and thence through the farm of E. W. Crumb.

Judge Fish of the Walworth county circuit court, appointed A. H. Hendrick of Delavan, J. B. Johnson of Darien, and W. E. Hoard of Sharon, as commissioners to appraise the damage incurred by said railway crossing the farm of E. W. Crumb. This commission reported in favor of allowing Mr. Crumb $1,035 for the damage so incurred, which decision, in all probability, will be final. The amount of land the road will utilize in thus crossing Mr. Crumb's farm will be about nine-tenths of an acre.

Wants America to Arbitrate.

Washington, May 27.—Guatemala has, in a manner, sought to intervene between the United States and Honduras in the Pears case. The Honduras government has resisted the demand to the utmost for an indemnity of $10,000 in behalf of the relatives of Pears. One of its movements was to ask to have the case referred to arbitration, but the facts were so clear and the precedents so strong that the state department declined the proposition.

Now United States Minister Hunter has informed the state department that the Guatemalan minister at Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, has come forward with an earnest appeal to the United States to arbitrate the case and not act harshly.

Washington, May 27.—Practically all the work of the war investigating commission in preparing for publication the testimony taken by that body, together with its report, has been completed except the printing, and the civilian employees have been given notice of their discharge. CHILD LABOR LAW FULLY EXPLAINED

MANUFACTURERS HERE RECEIVE INSTRUCTIONS.

Law As Now Laid Down Provides Among Other Things That No Time Shall a Child Under Fourteen Years of Age Be Employed—Other Points.

The various manufacturing plants in this city have received blanks from the state factory inspector in accordance with the law passed April 27, and known as "An act to regulate the employment of minors in the state of Wisconsin." The purpose of the new law is to abolish the custom of employing minors of a tender age. The blanks just received are for the purpose of keeping a register of the minors employed, the age and place of residence.

Section 1 provides that no child under fourteen years of age shall be employed at any time in any factory or workshop or about any mine nor in any mercantile establishment or at other employment except during vacation of the public schools of the locality in which the child resides.

Section 2 provides that every person or corporation employing minors shall keep a register in which shall be recorded the name, age, date of birth, place of residence of every child employed under the age of 16 years. It further provides that no such minor shall be employed except there is first provided and placed on file with such employer an affidavit made by the parent or guardian, and sworn to before a notary public, setting forth the name, date and place of birth and name, place and time such child has attended school. Such register and affidavits shall be shown to the factory inspector at any time upon demand.

Provisions are also made in the law that the inspector may visit all factories when he desires and provides for the prosecution of all offenders. The law empowers such inspectors to cause to be furnished a certificate from a physician that a child is able to perform such duties as his employment demands at any time if the child appears to be physically unable to perform such duties.

Section 6 permits the commissioners of labor factory inspectors or county judges to grant permits for a child over 12 years of age to enter employment which the law prohibits, provided it is necessary for such child to do such labor for the support of its family or itself under such limitations as seem advisable.

Section 8 defines manufacturing establishments, factories and work shops as used in the law, any section 9 provides that employers who violate the law are liable to punishment of not less than $10 nor more than $100 for each offense. It also provides the same punishment for refusal or hindrance of inspectors in their duties.

Section 10 provides that parents who violate the law shall be fined not more than $25 nor less than $5.

MORRISSEY FAILED TO APPEAR

Oshkosh Team Claimed To Have Signed Him for the Season.

William McGinley, Morris Crall, and Tom Sullivan of this city, are now playing base ball with the Oshkosh team. The Oshkosh Times says:

The opening game of base ball of the season, between the Indians and the Chicago Union, was a rather listless affair, devoid of features and brilliant work. This was due to the lack of practice on the part of the locals and lack of competition on the part of the colored gentlemen. Tom Morrissey failed to show up, and the supposition is that he has signed elsewhere, a good offer having been made the big fellow by an Indiana city.

The final score was 15 to 4. Schoettl and McGinley pitched the game for the locals, and the latter, who is to occupy a slab for the Indians, made a fine showing. He was strong against heavy hitters and handed some of them a mixture they failed to connect with. Jess, of Fond du Lac, caught, and did well. Crall played first in the absence of Morrissey; Haskell, second; Bruyette, third; Sullivan, short stop; Nicolai, left and McGinley in the field. Sullivan was in fine form. He accepted all of his chances and threw like a leaguer.

HYMN "THEY SLEEP IN PEACE"

Composed By F. B. Hargreaves, of This City

The following hymn, composed by F. B. Hargreaves, of this city, would be very appropriate for the Memorial day exercises and is sung to the music of "Lead Kindly Light."

They sleep in peace! Our comrades rest at last

In peaceful sleep;

The years of war and bloody strife are past

We will not weep,

But songs of gladness now our voices raise,

And sorrow's notes we turn to tuneful praise.

Our heroes died! We reap where they have sown.

The fruits of peace;

Their deeds and sacrifice will yet be known

As years increase.

In Freedom's cause they lived and fought and died.

We reap the blessings death to them denied.

Hail! glorious sons, who in the battle stood

So fearlessly;

Who fell and falling sealed with life's best blood

Our victory.

The years are passing, full of blessings fraught,

Which on the battle field were dearly bought.

So let the record stand, and stand for aye!

They sleep in peace;

We chant its glory this Memorial day.

It cannot cease;

The nation, strong in union, now is free,

And stands enthroned in peerless liberty.

HERESY IN CHRISTIAN CIRCLES

Adds Interest to Rev. Kempton's Series of Lectures

In these days there is much talk about "heresy" in Christian circles. Heresy trials have been common in some churches. Prof. Briggs, expelled from the Presbyterian church because of his views, has just been ordained in the Episcopal church, though not without vigorous protest on the part of some. Dr. McGiffert is being charged with heretical teaching by the Congregational national assembly. Rev. A. J. Haynes of Chicago, has so publicly declared his disbelief in some old doctrines that a Chicago daily in an editorial, says he should leave the pulpit. Never have questions concerning the bible been more prominently before the public. All of this adds interest to the lectures upon "Difficulties with the Bible" that Rev. A. C. Kempton is delivering Sunday evenings at the Baptist church. The public is cordially invited.

Mrs. Leavitt says that she has merely loaned the money and that when the building is finished the association will pay her rent from month to month.

"I don't know how the report got out that I had given the association the money. At any rate, such report is not true. I erect the building and they rent it. At my death I intend to will the building to the Janesville association."

WILL LEAVE COMPANY HERE

Miss Winifred Gray, of Rockford, Will Not Be An Actress

Miss Winifred Gray, of Rockford, who appeared as a leading lady with the William Owen company in this city recently, has announced her intention of leaving the stage at the close of her engagement with the William Owen company. This will be June 2nd, when that popular company plays their return engagement at Myers Grand, at which time the play house should be crowded to its utmost capacity.

Speaking of the rise of this popular young lady The Rockford Star says:

"She says she will join a concert company next year, as a reader. She wished to do so this year, but was disappointed in her management. Rockford admirers will command her ambition and will be glad that she is content with a short experience on the dramatic stage."

"She stated at the time she joined the Owen Company that she did so to gain ease for her platform work. Miss Gray's talents should certainly secure for her a position with a good concert company under the management of some of the standard bureaus of the country. That she will eventually find a good niche is assured."

"It would seem that she does her best work in light, fanciful or tender selections, her temperament being especially adapted for such. She never did anything so well in her offerings in this city as she did in 'A Study in Nerves,' from Life. This represents the bridegroom at a fashionable wedding. She was particularly good in the intonation of the recurring lines, 'Why don't the music begin?'"

"Miss Gray's career will be watched with interest by her Rockford friends, who wish her a full meed of success."

ONLY JUDGES FROM THE WEST

Messrs. Galbraith and Stericker at Philadelphia Horse Show.

Alexander Galbraith and R. P. Stericker, of this city, leave tomorrow for Philadelphia to act as judges at the approaching session of the Philadelphia horse show, which is the largest open air attraction of its kind in the country. The gentlemen have the distinction of being the only judges chosen from the west, and honor of which their many friends feel justly proud.

Mr. Galbraith expects to take his departure for Scotland immediately after his return from Philadelphia. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Galbraith. The trip will be one of pleasure and business combined.

"A Word to the Wise is Sufficient."

But some stubborn people wait until "down sick" before trying to ward off illness or cure it. The wise recognize in the word "Hood's" assurance of health.

For all blood troubles, scrofula, pimples, as well as diseases of the kidneys, liver and bowels, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the effective and faultless cure.

Poor Blood—The doctor said there were not seven drops of good blood in my body. Hood's Sarsaparilla built me up and made me strong and well. Susie E. Brown, 16 Astor Hill, Lynn, Mass.

Dyspepsia—"We all use Hood's Sarsaparilla. It cured my brother-in-law and myself of dyspepsia. I owe my life to it." M. H. Kirk, 607 Franklin St., Philadelphia.

Will You Build?

If you contemplate building this spring give ample thought to the plumbing of the new house.

It Costs But a Trifle More To Have a Double System of water service with a motor for elevating soft water to the reservoir for bath and lavatory purposes. We are putting this class of work in a number of new houses and will be glad to explain it to you.

Hot Water is the acknowledged best heat for the house. Our heaters will run with one-third less coal than any system you can put in.

Figures on work of any kind we give you cheerfully.

CONDUCTOR MEAD DIED THIS MORNING

PNEUMONIA CAUSE OF HIS DEMISE.

For Years He Was in the Service Of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad—Ill But One Week—Funeral of James A. Richardson and
Mrs. John O'Gara.

After a week's illness with pneumonia,
William Mead died at 9:30 o'clock this morning at his Terrace street home.

Several days ago he contracted a cold which gradually developed into a severe case of pneumonia.

Mr. Mead was forty-seven years of age and during the greater portion of his life has made Janesville his home.
For a number of years he has been in the employ of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, gradually working himself up to the position of conductor.
Besides a wife and two sons, three brothers and three sisters are left to mourn the loss of a loving husband, father and brother.

Notice of funeral later.

James A. Richardson

The funeral of the late James A. Richardson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Richardson, was held from the house, 137
Fourth avenue, this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. E. H. Pease, of the Presbyterian church, officiated and the interment was in Oak Hill cemetery.

Members of the Junior class of the High school, of which Mr. Richardson was a member, attended in a body as did also members of the Athena class.

The floral offerings were most beautiful.

A star and crescent piece made of pink carnations and white roses was the offering made by the Rusk Lyceum.

A wreath made of twelve dozen white roses tied with class colors—white and green—came from the class of 1900.

The High school base ball team, of which Mr. Richardson was a member, presented a beautiful piece made of pink and white roses in the form of two ball bats crossed.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Presbyterian church, presented a pretty design.
Cut flowers were offered in profusion,
the casket being fairly hidden from view.

When the body was borne away, the Christ Church Cadets did escort duty.

Song service was rendered by Mrs.
Minnie Menzies and Mrs. S. B. Lewis.

The pall bearers were members of the High school as follows: Allan Lovejoy,
Victor Marquisse, Frank Kimball,
Harry Nowlan, Roy Palmer and Graham Galbraith.

Mrs. John O'Gara.

The funeral of the late Mrs. John O'Gara was held from St. Patrick's church at 9:30 o'clock this morning.
Rev. E. M. McGinnity officiated, and the interment was in Mount Olivet cemetery. The pall bearers were: Patrick
Lillis, Patrick Collins, Thomas Kelly, Thomas Murray, Andrew Barron and James Dee.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN NEXT

At Myer's Grand Thursday Evening.

Al. W. Martin's big company of 60 white and colored will present "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at Myers Grand, Thursday, June 1, with a strong dramatic cast, among them, Milt. G. Barlow, the famous negro actor as "Uncle Tom." Mr.
Martin's company is an excellent one,
both in dramatic strength and numbers.
The scenic effects are gorgeous and shows a thrilling floating ice scene, showing the escape of Eliza over the Ohio river, with man eating blood-hounds in hot pursuit. A steamboat race and collision between the Nachetz and E. E. Lee. Plantation scenes, St.
Clair's residence by moonlight, and a grand tableau, transfiguration of Eva in the golden realms. The most gigantic free street parade will be given at noon, being fully a quarter of a mile long,
will be one of the striking features,
is composed of chariots, old log cabin, horses, shetland ponies, donkeys, one white band and two colored bands, including the famous whangdoodle pick-aninies and the giant drum major,
"Bastus," standing over eight feet high.

mations were of a high order, and it took the judges, Miss Vernon, Burr W.
Jones and Prof. Priest, twenty minutes to decide the winner.

The other speakers were Daisy Chase,
Fort Atkinson; Maggie Dean, West
Bend; Amy Woodruff, Janesville; Maud
Thery, Milton Junction; Lawrence
Teljequist, Wausau, and Mame Miller, Virequa.

Athletic Contest.

Local High school delegates to the state athletic meet held at Madison this afternoon, left the city in fine form, and expect to bring home their share of the honors.

A special train bearing all of the Milwaukee teams arrived yesterday with a big delegation of "rooters." Calumet and Ishpeming, both from Michigan, are also on the ground. Eau Claire, West Bend, Sparta, Fond du Lac and Green Bay, have sent big teams and hope to win, although East Side and West Side, Milwaukee, and Ishpeming are looked on as winners in the final scores.

Manager Fisher said that there were 314 actual athletes to compete in the games. This was the largest athletic meet of any description held in the Middle West this year.

THE BASEBALL REPORT.

Games Played Yesterday in the Three Leading Leagues.

box work, and Cleveland, overwhelmed by Baltimore, with Kitson on the slab. Brooklyn and St. Louis struggled for twelve innings and quit with the score a tie. The Phillies, though playing an up-hill game, succumbed to Pittsburg. The games:

425 Actual Telephones.

And we are still receiving applications daily, especially since the appearance of the old company's June list.

We desire to call the attention of the public to the fact that each telephone can be considered a full faced type number on the card, as all telephones installed are long distance full metallic circuits. To any present telephone users not on our list, who desire to be with the 425 we respectfully solicit their immediate application whereby we may have their names published on the card soon to be issued. The fact that the adoption by the old company of a sliding scale of cut rates or perhaps no charge at all has not hindered our growth, ought to convince future and present subscribers which telephone to use. The new list of the old company represents about 315 actual phones. In many instances names entered on the list of the old company will be found to call for instruments which have already been ordered out, some of them having been taken out over two weeks ago and many more will undoubtedly be discontinued June 1st.

Considering these facts we think that the few names on the old company's list which are not on ours will scarcely warrant many in either subscribing for the old phone or keeping both.

The names in small type indicate to some extent our growth since our first card.

Material is beginning to arrive for the long distance lines to connect Janesville with Madison and twenty-two towns and cities in Rock county, and the line will undoubtedly be completed in sixty or ninety days. Contracts have been let for exchanges in Beloit, Edgerton, Fort Atkinson and Mineral Point. In Monroe, Whitewater, Stoughton, Delavan, Elkhorn and Geneva exchanges are contemplated and Janesville will be connected.

If any corrections in the list are desired or your phones don't work to satisfaction, please notify the manager at once.

All applications, communications and complaints should be addressed to

When the practice of economy is a necessity, the cost of the soap used in a year is an important item. The grocer who has an eye to larger profits, may not suggest Ivory Soap, but you insist on having it. Ivory Soap is pure soap, through and through. That makes it the most economical and best.

CROW HUNTING IS THE SPORT

Rock County Farmers Should Inaugurate the Scheme.

Rock county farmers should try and interest their city friends and fond lovers of sport to assist them in trying to exterminate crows, which is all the go in the neighborhood of Elgin, Ill.

A few days ago fifty Elgin men, from all walks of life, ranged themselves on sides and started to hunt crows. The total number killed was over 600. The losing side was to pay for a supper for all. There was a discrepancy in the reports, as one side counted crows brought in an hour later than agreed upon, and the other side disputed the right to do so. As a result another big hunt will soon be had with other leaders.

A Burlington, Ill., gun club, consisting of thirteen members, slaughtered 419 crows in one day, an average of 32 crows to the man. The highest number killed by one hunter was 69. Farmers made up a purse, which was divided into four amounts.

This is certainly a novel and practical scheme, and could easily be inaugurated by Rock county farmers, and if carried out would result materially in saving much of their crops, destroyed by the pests.

There are several local sportsmen whom we know would gladly become members of such a club and assist in the extermination.

The Secret of Health

The health of the whole body depends upon the blood and nerves. Therefore the medicine that expels impurities from the blood and supplies the necessary materials for rapidly rebuilding wasted nerve tissues, reaches the root of many serious diseases. It is these virtues that have given their wonderful power to conquer disease, and caused the miraculous cures that have startled the scientific world. Thousands of cases have demonstrated that this remedy is an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after-effects of the grip, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People

Frank Tucker, is a prominent farmer, of Versailles, Indiana. His daughter, Lucy, is now fifteen years old; three years ago she began ailing. She had always been stout and in good health previous to this age. The rosy color in her cheeks gave way to a paleness, and she became rapidly thin. Her blood became impure, and as she grew weaker she became the victim of nervous prostration.

"Nothing the doctor could give her would bring about her former good health," said Mrs. Tucker. "She just kept falling off in flesh till she resembled a skeleton, and there seemed to be scarcely any life in her at all. We tried different remedies, but nothing seemed to benefit her. Most of the time she was confined to the bed. She was very nervous and irritable, and was almost on the verge of going into St. Vitus' dance."

"Finally the doctor told us to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Said he was treating a similar case with them and they were curing the patient. We began giving the pills at once, and the next day we could see a change for the better in her. The doctor came and was surprised to see such an improvement. He told us to keep giving her the medicine. He said one pill was enough for her, as she was too weak to stand a larger dose. We gave her one pill after each meal until she was well. We began giving her the medicine last August, and she took the last dose in October, having used eight boxes. She is now entirely well and stout, and has not been sick a day since, and we have no fear of the old trouble returning. We think the cure almost miraculous."

TALL IANE.

By Mary E. Wilkins.

[Copyright, 1898, by the Author.]
"You don't mean that's Jane's skirt, Mrs. Ward?"
"Yes, I do."
"Why, it's larger than yours."
"I know it. She's taller than I be. She's grown all out of everything lately. I've let down tucks an hems an pieced at the top, an now her pink gingham is most up to her knees. I had to buy her this new, so she'd look decent to go to school. Jane, come here a minute."
Jane was out on the doorstep making crocheted trimming. She did not seem to hear.
"Jane," her mother called again.
Then Jane came in hesitatingly. Her small head, with its mat of fair braids, drooped forlornly; her slender shoulders were bent. She pulled down her pink skirt nervously, trying to make it longer.
"Stand up here 'side of me," ordered her mother. "I want Mrs. Mason to see how much taller you be."
Jane's pretty young face flushed pink. She stood beside her mother, and the tears started in her eyes, although she tried to smile.
"There, you see she's a good half head taller," said her mother.
"You can't get through the door if you don't stop pretty soon, Jane," laughed Mrs. Mason, who was visiting the Wards. "I never see such a sight. An she ain't over 14!"
"She ain't 15 till next month," replied Mrs. Ward. "An if she don't git her growth till she's 18 I don't know where she'll be. Her father tells her he's goin to hire her out by an by for a telegraph pole."
Jane laughed feebly when her mother and Mrs. Mason did. Then she stole back to the doorstep, and the tears rolled down her cheeks, and she made a mistake in her edging. It was nearly time for her to start for school. Presently her mother came with her dinner pail. "Here's your dinner," said she. "You'd better start before long, so as not to hurry. It's a pretty warm mornin'."
"Yes'm," said Jane. She kept her face turned away from her mother so her tear stained eyes should not be noticed. Before she went into the house to get her hat and her schoolbooks she ran across the yard to the well and put some water on her eyes while she pretended to be drinking out of the tin dipper.
"You shall have your new dress to wear tomorrow," said her mother as she finally started with her schoolbooks under her arm and the dinner pail swinging. "You shan't wear that short thing again."
Jane tugged at her pink dress skirt as she went out of the yard. She even stopped a little to make it look longer. Nobody knew how sore Jane's heart was over her height. She had a mile to walk to school, and she never thought of anything else all the way. She had done all her arithmetic examples and learned to bound the countries of South America, so her mind was quite free for personal worries. As she went on she kept looking at the green branches of the trees beside the road. Once in awhile she reached up and tried to touch one. When she could, her heart sank. "There ain't another girl in school could," she reflected miserably.

Presently she came to a large white house, with a crab apple tree in the front yard. Mary Etta and Maria Starr lived there, and she saw the flutter of their blue dresses at the gate. They were waiting for her.
"Hello!" said Mary Etta as Jane drew near.
"Hello!" responded Jane, trying to make her voice cheerful.
Maria was eating a crab apple and did not say "Hello!" but presently both she and her sister stared wonderingly at Jane.
"What's the matter?" asked Mary Etta finally.
"Nothin's the matter."
"Yes, there is too. You've been cryin'."
Jane said nothing.
Maria offered her a crab apple. Jane shook her head at it impatiently.
"She's mad," said Maria, who was quick tempered herself.
"I ain't," returned Jane.
"Yes, you are. Come, Mary Etta. I ain't goin to walk with her."
But Mary Etta lingered. "What's the matter?" she asked again, quite lovingly.
"Nothin's the matter. I wish you'd let me alone," cried Jane, with a burst of tears. That was enough. Mary Etta and Maria, both hurried up the road with out switches of their blue starched skirts, and Jane plodded miserably on behind. She was no older than the Starr girls, but she was head and shoulders above them, and she had to have her hair done up, while they wore theirs down their backs. She was so large for her age her mother thought it looked better.
Poor Jane was the tallest girl in school, and not only that, but the tallest scholar. Not one of the boys was as tall as she, and not only that, but she was taller than the teacher. It did seem to Jane that the committee ought to have chosen a teacher who was taller, just out of regard to the becoming and suitable appearance of the school. A stranger might almost have taken her for the teacher, especially since her hair was gone up.

When she reached the schoolhouse, she hung her hat on one high, lone peg above the two regular rows on the girl's side of the entry. This had been especially allotted to her because she was the only one who could reach it. Every time Jane hung up her hat she felt a little foolish pang of mortification.
When the bell had rung, Jane sat at her desk, her pink shoulders and her pretty pink face above all the others. She looked like a tall, pink hollyhock in a bed of daisies. This was a trying moment for her. The committee came to visit the school, and a strange gentleman and his wife came with them. The wife wore a changeable silk dress, with flowers and a white plume in her bonnet, and all the children stared at her. Jane distinctly saw this strange lady turn her white plumed head toward her, then whisper to her husband. Then she saw him look at her and ask one of the committeemen who that tall girl was. She could tell what he said by the motion of his lips. Then he told his wife, and a little smile stole over her serene face between its soft curls of black hair. Jane thought she was laughing at her. She did not dream that the lady had noticed her because her face was so pretty and not because she was so tall.
The arithmetic class was called, and Jane had to put an example on the blackboard. She began quite low down. "Put your sum higher on the board, so as to make room for those who cannot reach," the teacher called out suddenly. "Height has its advantages," remarked one of the committeemen affably. The scholars tittered.
Jane rubbed out her example and stretched her slender arm up to the top of the board. Her face was blushing painfully, and there was such a lump

"Are you sick?" asked the teacher, bending low over her.
"No, ma'am," sobbed Jane. She would not say another word, and the teacher went back to her desk and called a class. She was a pretty little woman, with black hair arranged in curling little scrolls all around her temples. She kept looking at Jane's bent head and shaking pink shoulders. "Jane," she said presently in a clear, authoritative voice, "you may go out and get a pail of water."
The teacher meant it very kindly. It was considered quite a privilege to get a pail of water and then pass it around in a tin dipper. She thought it would serve to distract Jane's mind from her grief, whatever it might be. But it was conviction that the visitors were saying, "What, that great, tall, grown up girl, with her hair done up, missing!"

However, the change brought her next to Robert Carnes, who gave a sympathetic glance at Jane, which she felt rather than saw, but it comforted her. She and Robert were near neighbors and when they were children had played together a great deal.
When Jane went back to her desk, Maria Starr passed over a state slyly. There was a picture on it. Jane knew directly what it was meant for, although the drawing was very bad indeed. There was a long row of figures in triangular skirts and parallelogrammic trousers with their feet turned out at right angles on a line. These figures were of a uniformly small height; but passing them with her handkerchief to her eyes, and tears, represented by little dashes of the slate pencil, falling plentifully, was a very tall girl indeed. There was not quite room for her on the slate, and the top of her head was left to the imagination.
Jane did not smile nor look at Maria; she simply rubbed the picture out and handed back the slate. She wanted to cry, but she would not let the tears come. She pretended to be studying her spelling lesson very intently.
But the worst came when one of the committeemen addressed the school and in the course of his remarks said distinctly that intellect was not to be measured by size, and he often noticed that the smallest scholars had their lessons much better than those who were taller and older. Jane felt that he referred to her and little Hattie Baker and the bounding of Uruguay. Her cheeks burned hotter and hotter. Maria Starr, who was three desks off in the same row, leaned forward until she could see her and tittered. Mary Etta in the seat behind pulled her sister's arm to make her stop, but she did not heed.
Jane saw the committee and the strange lady and gentleman go out, while the teacher stood courtesying at the door, and all through a nearing cloud of tears. When the door closed after the company, she hooped her arms around her face and laid it down on the desk. The teacher came and stood beside her and asked her what the matter was. Jane only shook her head and wept.
"Are you sick?" asked the teacher, bending low over her.
"No, ma'am," sobbed Jane. She would not say another word, and the teacher went back to her desk and called a class. She was a pretty little woman, with black hair arranged in curling little scrolls all around her temples. She kept looking at Jane's bent head and shaking pink shoulders. "Jane," she said presently in a clear, authoritative voice, "you may go out and get a pail of water."
The teacher meant it very kindly. It was considered quite a privilege to get a pail of water and then pass it around in a tin dipper. She thought it would serve to distract Jane's mind from her grief, whatever it might be. But it was dreadful for poor Jane to pull herself up to her full height and crawl slowly down the aisle, with her arms crooked in a pink ring around her face, and all the school looking. She stumbled over a protruding nail, and everybody tittered, and the teacher called out "Hush!" sharply.

Jane went out with the water pail, but instead of filling it from the pump near the schoolhouse she set it down on the platform and fled desperately down the road to a little bridge over a brook. She ran around the corner under the bridge and crawled into some bushes on the bank of the brook. Her mind was made up. She would not go back to school. She had never been as miserable in her life, and the misery was all the greater because she was ashamed of it and ashamed to confess it. She did not want to tell even her mother that she minded so much because she was tall. She crouched low down in the bushes and wept. She was almost concealed by the coarse weeds and foliage of late summer. Some little flowers like orange butterfies danced in her face. Presently she heard a quick patter of bare feet on the bridge, then a break in the bushes.
"Hello!" called a hesitating voice. Jane made no sound.
"Ho, you needn't play you ain't there!" said the voice. "I see you come in here. I was looking out of the window. I raised my hand when teacher asked where you was, and she sent me out to fetch the water and tell you to come in."
Jane looked up and saw a boy's face peering down at her from the top of the bank, his brown cheeks flushing, his red lips parting in a bashful laugh.
"I ain't ever goin back to school, Robbie," said Jane, with a sob. "All the old childish comradeship seemed to come back to her. She had not seen much of him for a year or two. She had played more with girls.
"Why ain't you?" asked Robert.
"Oh, 'cause I ain't!"
"I saw that picture on the slate," said Robert.
Jane sobbed.
"I don't care. You're the prettiest girl in school anyhow," said Robert in a shamefaced way.
"Why, Robert Carnes! I ain't!"
"Yes, you are."
"Oh, Robbie! Maybe I shall be taller than I am now."
"I don't care if you are, you'll always be the prettiest. Come along."
"I ain't goin back to school."
"Teacher won't like it."
"I can't help it."
"Oh, come along."
"I won't." The girl's pink face turned up toward him like a pink flower from the bushes. There was a look in it that the boy knew well. He knew that when his old playmate said "I won't" in that tone she didn't.
Robert seated himself on the bank and began to whistle. Jane looked at him. She could see his slender shoulders in his little homemade blue and white shirt, and his handsome face gazing ahead abstractedly as he whistled.

"Why don't you go back to school?" she asked hesitatingly.
"Oh, I ain't going back if you ain't."
"Why not, I'd like to know?"
"Cause I ain't. Say, Mary Etta has got her head down on her desk crying 'cause you don't come in, and I seen Maria passing along some crab apples to put in your desk."
Jane said nothing. Robert whistled again.
"Robert Carnes, you go right straight back to school!" ordered Jane.
Robert went on with his tune.
"Teacher won't like it," said Jane.
"I know it. I s'pose she'll lick me, 'cause I'm a boy. I don't care." Robert whistled.
Jane waited a minute. "Well, I'll come," said she. "You go ahead and get the water."
There was a leap of bare feet over the bridge, and Jane came out from the swarm of flower butterfies, with undefined conviction that brought comfort in her childish heart, that, however tall she grew, although she might outgrow all her dresses, she would never outgrow love.
See in a Trap.
Eugene Sue, the French author, used to visit almost daily one of the most fashionable ladies in Paris, Mme. de D—, and held forth in her richly furnished boudoir on the conditions of the poor.
"Do you ever relieve their distress?" asked Mme. de D— at the close of one of these harangues.
"To a trifling extent," answered Sue.
"But though my gifts are small they are always cheerfully bestowed. I give one-fourth of my income in alms."
That afternoon, as he left the Cafe de Paris, where he had been eating a costly dinner, an apparently old woman, poorly clad, came up to him and begged earnestly for charity. "Go away!" was the stern reply.
"But I am starving. Give me a single copper to buy bread with."
"I will give you in charge of the police if you continue to annoy me."
"You will," said the beggar, "and, M. Sue, you are the man who writes about the miseries of the poor. You are the workman's champion, are you?"
"Who are you?" exclaimed Sue.
"Mme. de D—," was the reply, and the distinguished lady stepped into her carriage, which was waiting, and left the author to his reflections.
Not His Kind.
"Surely," said the young man, after her father had declined to entertain the proposition, "you are not prejudiced against me simply because I have no visible means of support?"
"No," the old gentleman replied, "I might overlook that, but I understand that you once took part in a chess contest that was played by cable. Any one who can find fun in that sort of thing is too cold-blooded to get into my family if I can help it."—Chicago News.

HER OBJECT LESSON.

She was very pretty, very witty, very sarcastic—her world had a wholesome dread of Mrs. Trelawney's tongue. She had just intimated a desire for an ice and her attendant satellites had disappeared at once, each eager to be foremost in the quest.
She had had a busy day, and it was pleasant and cool there behind the palm; she only wished that people would not whisper somewhere near. If only they were aware how much farther a whisper carried than an ordinary tone! And while she meditated an epigram on this subject, she opened her eyes and looked round impatiently for the whisperers.
There was a particularly ineligible corner near Mrs. Trelawney's snug retreat—a three-cornered, low-backed seat, in the full glare of the light, and unpleasantly close to an intrusive and spiky cactus.
Hither had retreated a poor cousin of the hostess, a little girl of 17, under-dressed and pale-faced, conspicuous only for a new and shining wedding ring. She had been alone most of the evening, and now it was she and her boy-husband whose whispering had disturbed Mrs. Trelawney.
"Darling, are you enjoying yourself?" whispered the boy-husband.
"So much, dear!" answered the little pale girl enthusiastically. "It's all so pretty and amusing to watch, I've never seen anything so pretty in my life!"
"I've been helping Lady Lucy; she asked me to take some ladies down to supper," the boy-husband went on, with a comical importance. "You're sure you are not dull here all alone?"
"Dull? Oh, dear, no!" cried the little girl, opening wide eyes of amazement. "Oh, there's Lady Lucy looking at us, dear; I expect she wants you again."

If only all the past 10 years could be lived over again, how differently she would use them!
Now it was too late, and then she suddenly sat up straight, with fast-beating heart. It was not too late, it could not be too late. She would begin this very night and try to restore something of the old loving relations of 10 years ago. She would call for her husband now at his club; she remembered having done so once or twice in those bygone days, when something imperative had prevented him from coming with her, to their mutual disappointment.
She gave the necessary order to her coachman and then sat tense and upright, her eyes bright, her cheeks flushed.
Ah, they were not far from the club now—five minutes more, and her new life would have begun!
She had no idea what the time was, but it could not be so very late, for the pavement was thronged with people—all going the same way, oddly enough, as it occurred to her after a moment. There were so many of them that presently the carriage was blocked and obliged to go slowly; she beat her little hands on the seat in her impatience and looked out again.
A policeman appeared, shouting inaudible directions and pressing forward through the crowd, which gave way reluctantly on either side. In her ungovernable impatience she let down the window and beckoned him to come nearer.
"Can't we get on?" she cried. "I am in a hurry. What is the meaning of this crowd?"
"They have come to see the fire, ma'am," the policeman answered, civilly. "I'm afraid you will have to go round."
"But we are almost there—the Rangoon club," she cried.
"It's the club that is on fire, ma'am," the policeman answered. Then, as she turned white, he added kindly: "Don't be frightened, ma'am; they've got the fire well in hand by this time, and every one is out."
"All safe?" Mrs. Trelawney gasped.
"Well, a few broken bones and such like," said the policeman, cheerfully. "Nothing to speak of, ma'am—only one gentleman killed. A sad business that."
"Who?"
"The gentleman who did such great things out in Burmah a few years ago—Maj. Trelawney."
"My husband!"
It seemed to her that she had known it all the time. She saw, as if in a dream, the sudden pity and respect in the policeman's face, and then she covered her own and sank back in the carriage.

The long agony of the drive seemed interminable, and yet when at last the carriage stopped she sat quite still for a moment, unable to nerve herself for the next move. Then the door was opened, and as if in a dream, she passed up the steps, walking firmly, her face white and her eyes set and hard. Her apparent heartlessness was silently noted at the time, and afterward freely commented on in the servant's hall.
Had they brought him—home? she wondered, with a long shudder. She was in the hall now, and some one was hurrying to meet her—the doctor. She was not surprised to see him there; in her dream-like state nothing seemed strange any more.
"I have bad news for you, Mrs. Trelawney."
"I know—I know!" she answered, petulantly. In her unreasoning misery she was annoyed by his hushed tone. Her own voice was unnaturally shrill and strained, and the doctor raised his hand in protest.
"What heartless creatures these pretty women are!" he was thinking—an unconscious echo of the servant's opinion.
"I must beg of you to control yourself," he said, sternly. "Everything knocking by her husband's bedside.

The doctor, following rapidly, stood, arrested at the door, looking in at the darkened room, the kneeling white figure, with clasped hands and large, fixed eyes, the swathed wreck of a man lying very still on the bed.
One hand lay outside the coverlet. Her own stole out slowly, hungrily toward it, as if her own darling scared her. She bowed her head over the bandaged hand at last and knelt motionless. The doctor, watching, and quite forgetting his scathing condemnation of a moment before, thought with a swift contempt of certain reports concerning the Trelawney's domestic happiness which had reached his ears.
Something came before his shrewd, keen eyes which blurred the picture before him. He turned aside for a moment and then was recalled by a swift, low cry, "Horace! O Horace!"
The doctor sprang forward and then drew back. The injured man's eyes had opened and were fixed on the shimmering white figure with an expression of mingled awe, unbelief, bliss.
"Clarara," said the faintest whisper in the world.
The doctor could scarcely hear it. He did not know that the old pet name had never been used for years.—London Forget-Me-Not.
"They say," said her dearest girl friend, "that the man she eloped with is addicted to drink."
"That's a mistake," replied the one to whom she was supposed to have given her heart. "I know him. He is not addicted to drink. He is generally soaked in it."—Chicago Daily News.

RED AND WHITE SERGE BATHING SUIT FROM HARPER'S BAZAR

The model from which our pattern of woman's bathing dress is made is of dark red serge (well shrunk before making), and is made upon very late lines. The skirt is a shaped three-piece design with no superfluous fulness at the top, but sufficiently wide for comfort and beauty at the lower part. No hem is allowed on the pattern which is published by Harper's Bazar where the design originally appeared, but a facing shaped to fit the curved edge accompanies it. The fulness at the back of the skirt is folded under in inward turning pleats, secured under a strap. The skirt is opened in front, and may be fastened by large buttons, as shown in this illustration, or by concealed "fly." In the present instance the trimming employed is white wash (linen) ribbon, stitched to the skirt upon the upper edge. The blouse is easy fitting, and follows the lines of an ordinary street blouse but for the low, rounded neck. The deep collar of white serge crosses the shoulders, and reaches in shaped points to the belt-line. The vest has a shallow yoke of white serge into which the red serge is closely gathered. The sleeves are of a comfortable size, and are gathered into the arm-hole, and finished at the elbow with a full ribbon-trimmed ruffle. The knickerbockers are made to reach just under the knee, and may be joined to the blouse or fastened to it by a series of flat bone buttons. The position for the buttons on the belt is indicated in the pattern, and a regular outside belt pattern, that may be ornamented with ribbon, to match the skirt, or simply stitched with white, is also included in the pattern.

To make this costume of serge 44 inches wide, 6 yards of red and 1 yard of white will be required. This costume may be had in complete form only.

OLD SOL NOT A BALL OF FIRE.

Scientist Says It Furnishes Heat to the Earth by Electric Currents.

From the Boston Transcript: Henry Raymond Rogers, M. D., of Dunkirk, N. Y., has evolved a new theory of the universe, which, if adopted generally, will revolutionize astronomical science, or at least that part of it relating to the sun. From the days of the stargazers of Palestine almost the popular notion regarding this central ruler of our family of planets has been that it is a great whirling globe of molten material in a constant and perpetual state of combustion. Now comes the man from western New York with the information that this idea is false, and that the conventional picture representing the sun with bright lines radiating in all directions into space, thus implying that actual heat and light are produced within, and of the body itself, is an utter absurdity. "This view of the sun," he says, "is strangely inconsistent with and antagonistic to certain well-known cosmical facts. Science teaches and demonstrates to be true that the universal space is inconceivably cold and utter darkness. A burning, 'fire ball' sun thus becomes an impossibility, an absurdity." Rather should the sun be represented, this philosopher maintains, as a huge planet, like unto the earth, only many times larger, perhaps even fit for habitation, surrounded by darkness and the stars, not on fire but tremendously electrical in its activities; in other words, a vast celestial dynamo producing currents of electricity which pass invisible and free through all the ninety-odd millions of miles of cold and darkness, until they meet their resistance at the earth and its atmosphere. Such resistance is all that is needed, in the mind of this twentieth century scientist, to develop the so-called sun-heat and sunlight, just as light and heat are produced in the electric current by the resistance offered by carbon or other material. Arc lights, such as stud our streets, are in effect the planets fed by the sun. After exciting our atmosphere to these and other activities, the electric sun currents pass into the earth, awakening in it gravitation and other electrical effects, thence completing the circuit by returning to the sun and arousing in it identically the same functions as on its humble satellite. It follows that if the sun emits neither light nor heat, but simply electric currents which produce these phenomena, it can no longer be said that the moon borrows from it its gentle effulgence, and the poet loses a subject for some of his daintiest conceptions. What has been with him heretofore a "full-orbed glory" becomes simply a prosaic electrical machine whose currents act on out atmosphere as do those from the sun, though to a less degree on account of difference in power. Science, with its newly found facts and progressive theories, has always been destructive of old imagery, but the old delusions are far less poetic after all than their successors when the poets' minds have become readjusted to them. But, says the practical reader, "What shall we say of the sun's dazzle, which is so real and so painful to the human eye?" Simply an optical illusion, answers the new theory. "Such dazzling brightness cannot be located at the sun; neither is it found in the black of infinite space nor in our atmosphere; therefore it can be found only in the depths of the eye of the beholder—I, e., upon the retina." So, too, there is no longer such a thing as a moonbeam; that which seems such is simply an illusion and is no more real than the existence of actual spots upon the surface of the sun! Dear, dear!

Banks for the Poor.

The announcement that the Merchants' Club is about to establish a company with $100,000 capital to loan money in small sums on collateral security at a fair rate of interest will be hailed with joy by many poor people, some of whom are now obliged to pay at the rate of 120 per cent a year for small sums of money. The movement to prevent the necessities of the poor being made the profit of usurers began, so far as this country is concerned, in Boston in 1809. The original association is still in existence as the Collateral Loan Company, 158 Tremont street. Loans are made as low as fifty cents. The rate of interest charged is 1½ per cent a month. At 1 Beacon street, Boston, is the Workingman's Loan Association. This association charges interest on its loans at the rate of 1 per cent a month. It reports that over four-fifths of all loans made by it are repaid, and its losses are comparatively trivial. Both these associations, though originally started as charities, pay an annual dividend of 6 per cent to stockholders. In New York the first start in this direction was made by the St. Bartholomew Mission and the various church settlements. With the last few years, however, a number of wealthy men have organized companies which loan money on chattels at fair rates of interest. They also have found the investment profitable. In many European countries there are pawnshops conducted by the government.

Glad She Saved Her Dog.

The last time Roland Reed was in Chicago he had a new play and was called before the curtain for a speech. He responded by relating one of his early experiences as a star. He said he was in Peoria and was feeling very much discouraged at the small business he was doing. He was standing on the street trying to devise some scheme by which to draw the public when a little girl came up to him and timidly asked him to buy a dog she was leading by a string.

"But I don't want the dog," protested Mr. Reed. "I am very fond of dogs, but I cannot buy yours, as I have no means of keeping him. Why are you so anxious to sell your dog, little girl?" "Oh, sir," she cried, "I want to get money so I can go to the show tonight. I want to go so bad."

"Well, you can go to the show all right. I am the show, and I'll give you a pass."

"Oh, will you!" exclaimed the little miss rapturously. "Can my sister go too?" Mr. Reed was in the humor to be liberal, and he wrote a pass for two. That night he said he noticed the two girls in one of the front rows, and he was sure they were the ones he had favored. He happened to be near the exit when the people were coming out after the show. He saw the two girls coming, and he heard them talking. "As they passed me," said the actor, "the little one was just saying: 'Say, Mary, I am awful glad I didn't have to sell the dog.'"

Jenny Lind Off the Stage.

Jenny Lind the woman was greater than Jenny Lind the singer. The bishop of Norwich's son, subsequently Dean Stanley, wrote that she had "the manners of a princess, with the simplicity of a child and the goodness of an angel." Her character showed itself, he added, "through a thousand traits of humility, gentleness, thoughtfulness, wisdom, piety."

At one of Dean Stanley's services in the cathedral she was moved to tears by the singing of the boy choristers and had places reserved for them at her concert the next morning. When she came on the platform, she greeted them with a smile of recognition, which the boys never forgot.

While she was singing in Copenhagen such was the excitement that court and town begged her to give them one more day of song. A gentleman of musical culture had, with his wife, anxiously looked forward to her visit. When she came, he was on a sick bed. Jenny Lind heard of his desire and found time to go to his house and sing to him and his wife.

When she went to London, Mendelssohn asked her to sing to a friend of his who had long lain upon a bed of sickness. She went and cheered him with songs, the remembrance of which is still cherished by the family. —Presbyterian.

Animals in Heraldry.

Perhaps lovers of heraldry will admit that whatever their other accomplishments may have been the heralds of old were not usually observant naturalists. Birds, beasts, fishes and reptiles, it is almost needless to say, have always entered largely into that art which cynics term "the science of fools with long memories," but which the student more justly defines as "the shorthand of history," as will be shown by a glance at any of the numerous books on the subject.

Lions, tigers, leopards, bears, elephants, wolves, foxes, rabbits, squirrels, monkeys, beavers, porcupines, horses, asses, camels, bulls, greyhounds and other dogs, rams, bears, etc., to confine one's remarks to animals only, can always easily be found, if not at once recognized, and the mistake of Le Glorieux in "Quentin Durward," who mistook Tolson d'Or's device of an ounce or tiger cat behind a grating for a "cat looking out at the dairy window," may still find followers even in the present day, when one reads, for instance, that the heraldic antelope has the head of a stag, a unicorn's tail, a tusk issuing from the tip of the nose, a row of tufts down the back of the neck and similar tufts on the tail, chest and thighs. —Field.

No Cause for Alarm.

Several persons were making purchases in the grocer's shop on a very stormy day, when an old man with a stick in one hand and a bundle in the other entered and asked:

"Did any of you drive up here in a cart?"

"Yes, I did," replied one man.

"Was it an old white horse?"

"Yes."

"And an old woman on the seat?"

"Quite right."

"And can she manage that boss?"

"I should think she can."

"Then it's all right," said the man of the stick and bundle. "The old horse has run away, and the old woman is hanging to the tailboard, shouting 'Murder!' with all her might, but if she can manage it there's no use anybody getting excited over it. What's the price of eggs today?" Pearson's Weekly.

Thackeray on Tennyson—1841.

Thackeray wrote: "Alfred Tennyson, if he can't make you like him, will make you admire him. He seems to me to have the cachet of a great man. His conversation is often delightful, I think; full of breadth, manliness and humor. He reads all sorts of things, swallows them and digests them like a great poetical boa constrictor, as he is. Now, I hope, Mrs. Proctor, you will recollect that if your humble servant sneers at small geniuses he has, on the contrary, a huge respect for big ones. Perhaps it is Alfred Tennyson's great big yellow face and growling voice that have made an impression on me. Manliness and simplicity of manner go a great way with me, I fancy." —Mrs. Ritchie in "Thackeray Sketch Books."

PLAN TO SAVE WINTER WHEAT CHARMING RESTFUL WOMAN.

It is to be pressed into the soil with a Light Roller.

Mr. Kimball, who is famous for church debt raising, and who lives on Hinman avenue, in Evanston, has an impression that the extreme cold of the past winter, as there was very little snow, has greatly injured the winter wheat. Whether his impression be true or not, he is fully persuaded that it is, and he is ready with a recommendation to farmers which he is equally confident will benefit them. He recommends that winter wheat be rolled, and he has written to the Chicago Sunday Chronicle directions for the farmers in the case. The time to do it, he says, is between the 20th of March and the 10th of April. That is, this should be the time in ordinary years. But the farmer may select any time of spring before the ground is so softened that the team will sink too deeply into the soil, but the winter frosts must be over. Mr. Kimball next tells how to do it. Use a light roller, just heavy enough to press the roots firmly into the soil. Roll a few rods and then examine the surface. Then, not using the roller, but in any convenient way, put the corners of your field into the same condition. This is to enable the roller to do continuous work, to go round and round, not roughing any part of the field. This done, a good crop of wheat will, he says, be insured. "Wheat," to use his own words, "is a strong plant, the king of grasses, and if thus pressed back into the soil after a cold winter it will grow strong, sturdy roots, grasp the earth firmly, and produce large, vigorous straws and full heads of fine sample wheat. Ground so treated will grow wheat that can endure in wind and rain and resist any tendency to lodge." If any farmer whose eye may light on this item knows his winter wheat to be injured by the frost, he may think it worth while to try Mr. Kimball's method of saving it.

MISCELLANEOUS.

In a recent lecture delivered at Liverpool, Dr. William Carter pointed out that the deaths directly attributed to intemperance in 1896 were 91 per 1,000,000 among males and 52 per 1,000,000 among females; that the rate is constantly increasing; and that the deaths are increasing among women far more rapidly and in a far greater ratio than among men.

This is how the editor of the Bristol (Va.) News squares himself with a prominent citizen: "In our write-up on Monday of the Walker-Hamilton shooting affair on Saturday night, we inadvertently and unintentionally omitted to mention Dr. W. K. Vance as one of the physicians who was in attendance upon General Walker. It was with no intention upon our part to withhold the credit due this skilled physician for the valuable services rendered."

The regular troops in the Philippines are armed with the new magazine rifle, thirty caliber, and have used smokeless powder during the entire campaign. The volunteers are equipped with the old magazine rifle of forty-five caliber, and have been using the old-fashioned black powder until recently, when supplies of smokeless powder reached them. For some time, therefore, nothing but smokeless powder has been used in the Philippine campaign.—Chicago Record.

Beds of mahogany sawdust, which may be found at almost any mill, and have heretofore been allowed to go to waste, have been discovered to have a value. Successful experiments prove that it can be used for curing hams, and experts state that mahogany smoked hams are of superior flavor and command higher prices than any other brand. The dust has become so valuable that the logs brought here in the future from Cuba and Central America will be sawn by special machinery made for this kind of work. The dealers will save not only the dust, but also the extra freight on the refuse, which has heretofore added to the cost of shipment. The dust gives a sweet odor to hams, and closes the pores of the meat, by this means retaining its natural flavor.—Philadelphia Record.

Melancholy Thought.

When a man really gives his thoughts up chiefly to eatables and drinkables he generally ceases to think of anything else after awhile. It is related in an old book on French cookery that Fontenelle, a French author of the early part of the eighteenth century belonging to the school of the precieuses, or literary exquisites, was found one beautiful morning lying at ease on the slope of a hill. In the valley was a large flock of sheep. They skipped about daintily, waiting for their guardian to take them home. A friend of Fontenelle surprised him gazing meditatively upon these sheep. "Aha!" said the friend; "the amiable philosopher ponders, without doubt, upon the vicissitudes of life." "Yes," said Fontenelle. "I had been carefully looking over this flock, and I said to myself, It is possible that among these 200 sheep there is not one tender leg of mutton!"

A GAME WITH DEATH.

Kannoga, an Indian boy of the Coeur d'Alene, was sitting one evening with Aakloo, his little sister, at the edge of the forest on the shore of Coeur d'Alene lake, and was telling her a favorite story, when at one of her interruptions he laughed and leaned carelessly back and looked straight into the eyes of a cougar.

"If I were drowning, you would swim out into a great lake, too, like Grandfather Grey Beaver did, wouldn't you?" the girl asked. She spoke indignantly, for that day she had heard an old man say that boys like Kannoga, who went to school in the reservation instead of into the forest, could never be brave Indians, and she was sure that her brother was very brave.

It was her show of indignation and her eager confidence that caused him to laugh now and lean back.

She waited, but he did not answer.

With both hands clasped over his copper-colored shin, and one bare foot raised slightly above the log on which he was sitting, he stared into the great restless eyes that looked down at him from the nearest limb. He was without a weapon of any kind and the cougar was full grown, with a body dry-looking and gaunt with hunger.

Although its glance was for the moment fixed on him, he could see that it had been watching Aakloo, and that its interest was still centered on her, as if it had chosen her for its victim. He was seized with a sudden fear that she might move unexpectedly and thus cause the creature to spring upon her; yet he sat there seemingly unable to speak or to think what ought to be done.

"You would, wouldn't you?" asked the girl. Her voice broke the fascinating spell of those terrible eyes. Kannoga knew that she would turn in a moment to see why he had not answered, and in order not to direct her attention to the panther he lowered his glance and met hers.

But there was something in his face that made her afraid, and he looked with startling intentness far beyond her, down the long, darkening stretch of deserted shore, toward the skin-covered tepee by the spring, where Mar-tala, their mother, and Sis-sos-ka, their father, lived during the hot summer.

"Stand still!" said Kannoga, as calmly as he could. It cost him a great effort to remain quietly there, without looking up, when he knew what was overhead; but the effort caused him to think more clearly.

"Shut your eyes," he said suddenly. "What for?" asked Aakloo, frightened still more at the unaccountable change in his voice.

For a moment his fingers tightened convulsively over his shin, then gradually relaxed and unclasped. He lowered his upraised foot, moving it slowly, very slowly, down beside the log, and when it rested firmly in the sand he reached cautiously forward and caught the girl by the arm.

"We shall play a new game," he said then, and the strange, eager suggestion of a smile that flashed over his face reassured her.

"Oh!" she exclaimed, and at once shut her eyes.

Kannoga now looked steadily at the cougar, while he turned his sister about so that she faced along the shore.

"Walk as slowly as you can—with your eyes shut," he said. She started slowly enough, but the fierce eyes overhead began to watch place, watching the cougar, and holding its attention by the constant movement of his slender arm and of his grimy, tattered sleeve.

When Aakloo was at a safe distance the sense of his own danger came suddenly upon him.

If Sis-sos-ka would only come with his rifle—or Gray Beaver, an old man now, but still a great hunter. If he had only told Aakloo! He turned his head and looked after her. Down the winding track of sand beside the still lake, both grown a dull gray in the evening light, he saw her running, and he knew that long before she could reach the tepee he would be beyond the need of rescue.

He had turned his head only for an instant, but in that instant the cougar had crept nearer and its long tail had begun to swing slowly, stealthily, from side to side.

Kannoga saw no hope of escape, but with every sense alert he studied his desperate chances.

The panther lay crouched with its head toward the forest, while he sat facing the lake. When he had carefully measured the space between them and the distance to the water he jumped away from the log and ran directly under the panther.

The animal instantly shifted its head, as if to leap down from the other side of the limb, but the boy did not appear there, and it turned with marvelous agility before its great yellow body shot into the air.

Kannoga was crushed down under its weight, but he had reached the lake and fell where the water was nearly knee deep. He felt the panther release its grasp in order to find firm footing, and when he raised up for air discovered its dripping head little more than an arm's length from his own.

Then he took a deep breath and lay down upon the bottom, hoping that the panther would leave him.

It stood there, however, watching over him and waiting.

He started to crawl out from shore, but it seemed to him that he had hardly moved when the heavy claws sunk into his leg and dragged him back. Then, without letting go its hold, the panther immediately shifted its position and began to drag him out into shallower water.

He made desperate efforts to hold fast to the lake bed, for he knew what the end would be if he reached the shore, but his fingers only plowed through the sand.

The sharp point of a rock that tore him as he was dragged over it gave him hope. He grasped it with both hands and clung with all his strength, but in an instant his fingers were digging vainly in the sand again.

At last he raised his head for air. The panther at once let go of his leg and came at him with open mouth; but it moved slowly in the water, and Kannoga, by a great effort, stood up.

Then the beast sprang upon him. The boy had nerved himself, however, and fell as far out from shore as he could.

When the feeling of dizziness that followed the shock had past he found that the panther held his arm in its mouth and was swimming—that its feet did not touch bottom.

Then, in spite of the terrible pain it caused him he pulled his arm down until the cougar's head was submerged. Very soon it released its hold.

Then the Indian boy stood up again, and this time he became the aggressor.

Grasping the sleek, wet head with both hands, he forced it deep into the water. The panther's feet touched bottom and its violent struggles threw him down, but he got up again and held the glaring eyes and red mouth with its white teeth more carefully—just under the surface of the lake.

Kannoga became very weak, and his legs trembled feebly under him, but he was thankful that they were long, for he could stand with his head in the cool evening breeze while the cougar was drowning.

At first the panther made fearful sounds as the water filled its lungs, but these presently ceased, and at last it hung a dead weight in the boy's hands. He let it sink and then loosened a stone from the lake bed to roll upon his head.

His wounds were slight, but painful, and the terrible battle had so weakened him that when he reached shore he fell exhausted, with his face toward the tepee.

He could not see Aakloo now, nor even the canoe that came in a moment to where he lay.

Gray Beaver and an old friend, paddling out from camp, had called to the girl as she ran on the shore, and had laughed when she told them why she could not turn her head to look after them.

They had seen the boy and the cougar in the edge of the lake, and their paddles had swung faster and with stronger strokes than they had used for many a year.

When Kannoga opened his eyes Gray Beaver leaned over him and spoke gently:

"Aakloo will understand that game better when she is older," he said.

And across a narrowing stretch of water the boy saw her waiting with Mar-tala.

This holds good in a Furnace as much as in anything else. A poor, cheap Furnace is the bane to any man's life. He pays almost as much for a half good heater as he would for a last a life time, are more economical in fuel, and will absolutely not escape gas. No bolts are used throughout the Furnace. Fire pots are constructed in two heavy parts, allowing them to expand and contract at the very point where required.

Mueller Furnaces have many superior points over others—their being of cast iron adds weight and also extra heat. We have one set up on our floor so that you can see all about it.

SPENCER, "The Newest." ON THE BRIDGE.

HELD UP HIS HAND.

her intently again and to grow restless, while a yellow foot advanced un- easily along the limb and broad tawny jaws stretched farther and farther downward as she moved away.

But Kannoga silently held up his hand and waved it in the air. At this the panther's attention, attracted by the unexpected and rapid movement, was withdrawn from the girl.

"Go faster," said the boy, "go faster."

She was out of reach now; he could tell by the fainter sound of her bare feet in the sand.

"Run!" he called. "Open your eyes and run, but don't look back, and don't stop till you stand in the tepee with Mar-tala."

"Is that all of the new game, Kannoga?" she asked, doubtfully.

"No," he answered, "there is more." Meanwhile he still sat in the same
